Introduction
Module 2 Lesson 5

During training of foreign soldiers it becomes necessary to identify your branch of service and the expertise and specialties found in that branch. In an effort to organize and train these foreign soldiers you will have to explain the Special Forces organization and the MOS's that make up the team. Additionally, you will have to equate your organization to that of the foreign soldiers being trained and both ask and answer questions pertaining to these organizations. This lesson is designed to provide you with a solid foundation of basic military terminology to adequately ask and answer questions pertaining to the military.

His Majesty King Bhumibol is the Highest Commander of the Royal Thai Armed Forces

Military Service and Military Education in Thailand

Thai law requires that all male citizens serve in the military, this is called □□□□□□□□□□□□ – military draft. Young males are required to register for the draft when they become eighteen years of age. They are not liable for compulsory service until they reach twenty. Those who are physically disqualified, Buddhist monks, career teachers, cadets attending the military academies or university students will be exempted. Those who are drafted will serve their duty for 2 years. Normally, the first three months are devoted to military training conducted in □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□– Basic Training Units.

Drafted servicemen who want to stay in the military after the mandatory 2 years can do so if they apply and if approved by military authorities. After a short period of additional training, they can be promoted to higher ranks and can serve till they finally retire from the military.

Military education and training for officers is conducted in the Armed Forces Academies Preparatory School. To enter, applicants must pass competitive exams, must be at least 15 years old, and secondary school graduates. After 2 years of study at the Prep School, pre-cadet graduates can choose to go to 3 different military academies: Army, Navy or Air Force. If they want to be in the police force, they can go to the Police Academy. The Army, Navy and Air Force require 5 years to graduate while the Police Academy requires only 4 years. They are awarded the rank of second lieutenant after graduation.

Pre-cadet graduates of the Prep School who will enter the medical field attend the Military Medical Academy for another 6 years and are awarded the rank of captain after graduation. The diplomas from these institutions are recognized nationwide and are presented to civilian employers after the service member leaves the military.

The Academies also provide post-graduate training for selected commanders and engineers in, respectively, combined arms and specialized technical fields.

Also, there are non-commissioned officer schools: □□□□□□□□□□□□□□ □□□□□□-□□□□-□□□□□-□□□□□□. Candidates are secondary school graduates and must pass competitive exams as well as a physical exam. They are awarded the rank of Private First Class (□□□□□□) after 2 years of study.

To become high level commanders or staff officers, selected officers need to go to another academy, namely the well known □□□□□□□□ □□□□□□□□□□□□□– Command and General Staff College, which in 2 years trains junior officers to work as □□□□ □□□□□□□□□ (□□.)– General staffs of military districts.

The mandatory retirement age for officers and NCOs is when they reach the age of 60. They can earn full retirement and other benefits (medical, discount on transportation fares). When soldiers served in war zones like during WW II, or in the Korean and Vietnam Wars, their time in the war zone will be doubled. This is called □□□□□□□□□, which allows the soldier to acquire more time of service to add on their pension after his retirement and also allows for faster promotion.

Females can enter the Armed Forces including the Police Forces. If they meet all qualifications and graduate from a 4 year college, then they are awarded the rank of 2nd Lt. Female candidates with 2 year college degree or lower will be awarded an NCO rank. Most of the military occupations for females are in the non-combat fields of finance, medical, and administrative skills. As of the year 2000, the highest rank for a female in the military is Major General.
